Expected Release Date for the iPhone 17

Apple typically follows a consistent schedule when it comes to releasing new iPhones. The company usually announces its latest iPhone models in early September during their annual keynote event. After the official announcement, the phones are typically available for pre-order within a week, with the official sale date occurring about a week later. Based on this pattern, the iPhone 17 is expected to be unveiled in September 2025, with sales starting around mid to late September.

The exact date will depend on Apple's specific plans, but if history is any guide, the iPhone 17 will likely be available for pre-order a few days after the announcement, with the actual release date falling about one week later. As a result, the official sales date for the iPhone 17 is likely to be around September 20, 2025.

For those who want to get their hands on the iPhone 17 as soon as it becomes available, pre-ordering is the way to go. Pre-orders typically start within a few days of the announcement, and it's always a good idea to act quickly, as the demand for new iPhones is usually very high. If you're looking to secure your iPhone 17 on the first day of release, here are some things to consider:

iPhone 17 Availability Around the World

While Apple typically launches new iPhones in the United States, Canada, and several other countries first, the iPhone 17 will likely roll out to additional markets in the weeks following the initial release.
